ABSOLUTELY PURE

DEATHS.

George L. Larson, aged seventeen years, and a son of Ludwig Larson, of Maple Grove, died last evening of peritonitis.

Anna, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bacon, died on Wednesday of heart failure. The funeral was held yesterday, Rev. Grove officiating.

Mrs. Maggie O'Neil, wife of J. M. O'Neil, aged 27 years, died Thursday morning, Sept. 24, of malignant jaundice. The remains will be taken to Danbury, Iowa, for burial.

F. W. Wieland received the sad news by wire on Wednesday morning of the death of his father, George Wieland, at Mt. Gilead, Ohio, and left on the noon train for that place. Mr. Wieland was in his 75th year, having resided in the above place for many years, and commanded the respect and esteem of the entire community in which he lived. The telegram contained no particulars and his death must have been sudden.

Might Have Been Worse.

What came near being a disastrous fire on Wednesday afternoon was averted by the excellent work of the fire department. The blaze was in the alley between Fourth and Fifth street where a quantity of shavings had been ignited by some small children. A strong wind was blowing from the south and although the fire was discovered in a very short time after it started the flames were fanned into a furious blaze which soon enveloped D. E. Slipp's barn. The department was at the scene in a very short time and turned their attention to saving Mr. Slipp's house and adjacent dwellings, which they did after a hard fight although at several different times the buildings were on fire. The barn was completely destroyed together with a large quantity of bedding and winter clothing, while in the barn was stored 125 bushels of oats. An adjoining barn belonging to Chas. Foster was also burned. The strong wind carried burning brands onto the roof of the First Congregational church and fired that structure, the water and fire causing a damage of some $400 to the property.

The loss on the church and the Slipp property was fully covered by insurance.

Shaking Minarets of Ispahan.

When I first came in sight of the minarets, I confess that my expectations were wonderfully disappointed. Instead of the graceful, airy forms of bright colored tiles and gilding I had anticipated I saw two constructions exactly like the brick chimneys of an American foundry, rising some 20 or 30 feet above the roof of a dilapidated mosque. I felt inclined to turn tail and ride home again. Their custodian, however, prevailed on me to ascend one of the narrow stairs which lead to their summits. He mounted one and I the other, and as soon as we were aloft he signaled "attention" and commenced swaying his body slowly backward and forward. Both the minaret were on and the one 12 or 14 yards off followed his motions and began to lean and sway like pliant willow wanders. In a few moments their oscillation became so great, and we got so far out of the perpendicular, that I began to repent my curiosity and was glad to descend to terra firma. It is not difficult to understand that a single tower can be so constructed that a man at its top can make it oscillate. The mystery is, how he can make a second tower, at a distance, participate in that oscillation.—Outing.

The Rights of Privacy.

The illustrated journalism now prevalent finds its finest achievement in the publication of photographs unconsensually taken. The value does not seem to lie in the fact that the photographs are of notabilities, but that they have been taken by stealth when the subjects were unconscious of the purpose of the person manipulating the camera. Indeed it is a well known fact that at least one of the newspapers of New York keeps a photographer busy in the streets of the metropolis taking "snap shots" at every person who appears to be of consequence. These are used at once or filed away for use when occasion arises. Now, such practices are unquestionably invasions of the right of privacy, but we are told by the courts that the victims of such practices may not restrain by injunction the publication of photographs so taken, but that the remedy lies in a recovery for damages.

This is no remedy at all, for the chances would be that some demagogue of a judge would declare that the hurt was but fanciful and too trifling to estimate.—North American Review.

A Storm Trewing.

"Mrs. Jagger, I hear that you told Mrs. Sawyer that my little Jimmie looks like an idiot."

"Did nothing of the kind. All that I said to Mrs. Sawyer was the subject was that the little fellow was the perfect image of his mother."

Then the mother shrieked for the maid to bring her bonnet, and when she left the house there were thunder, lightning and the indications of a cyclone in her eyes.—Detroit Free Press.

The angels may have wider spheres of action, may have nobler forms of duty, but right with them and with us is one and the same thing.—Chapin.

The "era of Alexandria" was adopted by many early Christians, who assumed the interval between Adam and Christ to have been 5,500 years.

When a boy begins to wash his neck without being told, it is a sign that he is passing into the ordeal of his first love affair.

The silver quarter was authorized by act of congress in 1793, April 2, and coinage was begun in 1796.

In Great Britain there are 1,047 women to 1,000 men.

Water crosses are called an enemy of sorcery.

A Hebræw Tradition.

According to Hebræw tradition, the rod of Moses and the table of the Commandments were set in sapphires. The stone symbolizes loyalty, justice, beauty and nobility.

Inherited Gift.

Grady used to explain his ability to talk by saying, "My father was an Irishman, and my mother was a woman."—Augusta (Ga.) Herald.

The Democratic Situation.

If the policy of forcing facts and the ability to reason upon them have not departed from the free silver Democrats, they will not attempt to commit the national convention to their theory.

The facts of the political situation briefly are:

First.—That the Democratic party has been defeated in every presidential election since the war when it loomed forward financial unconsensually has been successful in every contest in which it stood for honest money.

Second.—That it cannot carry a single northern state or one-half the border States free silver and consequently will be beaten disastrously in the election upon that issue.

Third.—That it cannot hope to carry the house of representatives upon that issue. The majority against free coinage has increased from 48 in the Fifty-second congress to 123 in the present house. There are no signs of gains for silver anywhere this year.

Fourth.—Being unable to elect either a president or a house upon this issue, do its supporters hope to throw the election of a president into the house? In that case the choice of the Republican candidate is absolutely certain.

Conceding that the free silver Democrats will be able to write their idea into the platform, what can it profit them? What are conventions for if not to improve the conditions of success or to put the party in the way of a triumph in the near future? Is the free silver fall all there is of Democracy for our friends at the west and south? "Only common sense is necessary" to show them the utter futility of their present course.—New York World.

An Archbishop's Wit.

The stories that are told of Archbishop Ryan's wit would fill a small volume. A well known priest called upon him one day to ask for a vacation on the ground that his health required it. As he was noted for his frequent absences from his parish, the prelate could not let slip the opportunity. He granted the leave of absence promptly, with a recommendation. "The physicians say that you need a change of air, father?"

"They do, your grace."

"How would it do, then, to try the air of your parish for a month or two as a change?"

He remonstrated once with a priest whose silk hat had seen its best days before the war. "I would not give you that hat for 20 new ones," said the priest. "It belonged to my father, who fell in the rising of 1848."

"And evidently fell on the hat," said the archbishop.—Household.

Charlie Towne Speaks.

Hon. Chas. A. Towne, of Duluth, congressman from this district by the grace of Republican votes, and now

a candidate for re-election on the democratic ticket, delivered an address at the opera house on Friday evening last. The house was completely filled, but a large majority of those present were Republicans and sound money advocates, who went to hear Mr.

Towne because of his ability as an orator, and because they had a curiosity to hear him explain how the great Republican party had left him

instead of his leaving the party. Mr.

Towne spoke for over two hours, and it was but fair to state that he made an excellent speech from his standpoint, much better than one would imagine could be made in defense of a theory that requires a great deal of twisting of facts, and contrary to all experience. Mr. Towne insisted he was still a Republican, which must have been cold comfort for old line Democrats, who thought he was a Democratic convert. He still claims to be for free protection, but forgot to say why he was working for Bryan, who has time and again denounced protection

as a swindle and a fraud. He admitted that he had prospered times during Republican rule previous to 1893, but claimed it was due to large purchases of silver under the Sherman act. He evidently forgot that the hard times and panic of 1893 commenced almost a year before the Sherman bill was repealed and while it was in force, and that congress was assembled in extra session to repeal the Sherman act as one of the causes of the panic. He probably also forgot that two years ago he attributed those prosperous times to Republican principles and policies, and the hard times of the past few years to Democratic incompetency

and threats to disturb wise Republicans policies. However, just to show what Charlie thought two years ago,

we give the following extract from a speech made on the same platform, when accepting the nomination for congress:

"The Democratic party, after coming to power a year and a half ago in the midst of a prosperity which unexplained, with a proclaimed policy of onslaught upon every principle upon which that prosperity rested, succeeded by the mere exercise of its power in the life giving current of trade and enterprise into a condition of suspended animation, and after a protracted exhibition of incapacity and discord, has foisted upon the country a measure of far reaching economic legislation that is consistent with no theory, responsive to no party promise, and fraught with only so much relief to the stricken industries of the country as that which comes from the sense of certainty that it has at length done its worst. The party has irretrievably forfeited the confidence of the people. * * Between "unsound plank" as Mr. Towne stated?

Did he not let him up and if he did isn't it reasonable to suppose he was equally truthful about the rest of his authorities? However, to show that he has changed, we print the following extract from his speech that year:

No statesman can be called superannuated as long as he is able to make a phrase. Mr. Gladstone has just called the sultan of Turkey an "assassin on a throne."

Many philologists teach that the most ancient language of Asia Minor was the Phrygian, and that the Syriac, Hebrew, Phoenician and Arabic were dialects of this previous tongue.

The king of Greece is said to be an excellent farmer. There is nothing like having a place in the country to retire to when a ruler knows that any hour may bring about a revolution that will upset his throne.

A fearful monster of the deep, a king cuttish or octopus, became stranded recently on the Irish coast. Its arms or tentacles were thirty feet long, so that it had a grasp of seventy feet, sufficient to drag down a vessel or strangle a whale.

In South Kensington museum may be seen the famous carpet from the mosque of Ardabia. The price being more than the authorities of the museum were in a condition to give for it, several gentlemen supplemented the sum which the museum had prepared to pay, and the finest of its kind in Europe has thus been acquired for the nation.

The friends of the late Robert Louis Stevenson think that his physical constitution was not fitted for a stateship. That should not be a valid objection, but there have been many eminent men to whom states have been entrusted, and if they were to revisit the glimpses of the moon and take a peep at the sculptor's work they certainly would not recognize themselves. A Roosevelt, however, to the death of the sculptor takes it.

By the death of Prof. Francis J. Child, Harvard not only loses her oldest professor in active service, but one of her most famous instructors as well. He was a scholar of rare attainments and of remarkable equipment in the English literature. England is worked up over the un-economic treatment of the speaker of the house of commons by the German custom house officials at Cologne. Mr. Gully had no spirits or tobacco to declare, but he did have a pack of playing cards. He explained who he was, but that made no impression on the officials, who kept him and his wife standing for an hour in the railroad station, while each card was lawfully stamped, and then allowed a fine of twenty marks on him.

The appellate court of New York has handed down a decision to the effect that a person who is injured while riding on the front platform of a street car may have cause of action against the company. The companies always set up a defense in such cases that the passenger had no right to ride on the front platform, and that he was not inside the car, and that, therefore, the passenger, being guilty of contributory negligence, is not entitled to recover damages. The highest court thinks otherwise.

It is now said that Germany has objected to England's choice of a sultan of Zanzibar, and wishes the usurper, who is still sheltered at the German consulate, to be placed upon the throne. Two German vessels, loaded with arms, and bound for Zanzibar, have entered the Red Sea, and it is interesting to know that Germany's interests are so much concerned in the sultan in Zanzibar with England for Holland, and it is difficult to see what control of its affairs she can now have. There is a homely proverb which would fit her case, that you cannot have your cake and eat it too.

One by one all the coarse and vulgar features are being eliminated from the football game. First, the gory flying wedge was barred out and the rules so revised as to decrease the necessary number of physicians in attendance to an appreciable extent. Up to this year, however, the game has always been played out of doors, with the result that many a high-bred college youth had to consult a specialist on chapped hands. Now the Chicago university proposes getting around this difficulty by holding its Thanksgiving day game indoors. Of course this is only another step in the line of the aesthetic, and many uncouth features may be wiped out, but the good work is progressing rapidly, and the evolution of the once brutal sport into a game of bean bags is but the matter of a few years.

For Summer Tans.

The athletic girl can do much to improve, for the summer, her tanned skin by submitting it to a thorough scrubbing night and morning. She must scrub well, must be careful to avoid a rubber brush, and must look upon soap and the free use of water as factors. Here are very simple directions which she should follow every night while she is in, say, athletic summer girl. Just as she would like to should take her scrubbing brush, which has been made for this purpose, rub it well with soap, dip it in hot water, and then literally scrub her face, neck, arms, legs, etc., with it. She should be careful to use good soap. An opaque soap is to be preferred to a transparent one. After she has thoroughly scrubbed it should be rinsed in hot water and dried with a soft towel. Then a cream should be gotten, rubbed on the face, and the skin allowed to remain over night. In the morning the cream should be washed off with hot water and then the face well rinsed with cold water.

News Takes Fire in the Wilderness.

How news is disseminated is a matter of wonder to the Northerner, accustomed to the postoffice and the daily paper. It is an old saying to the South, "go far, fast, and in a good way," the rarity of the medium, and the saying proved true in the deserts of Arabia applied to be equally true in the Carolinas. When we were in the saddle on the carriage (at least we did at the beginning of a two days' excursion into the wilds of the hills, over roads so rough and so bad that a horse and a mule cart had ever been known to pass them before, and on your homeward way, a man comes down from a mountain, and says, "I have told you that Adams, some five miles away, has got your cape and will carry it to town tomorrow." Here and there beside the wood roads, and at the crossing of two ways, you may see a lot of board nailed to a stump, with a little pole, horse and a paper tacked upon it proclaiming some matter of public interest; but your cape was not such a matter, and the board is nailed to the stump, and your tale can not read.—Western North.

The Classics.

Theory that They Were Forged by Monks of the Middle Ages.

In the seventeenth century Father Hardouin, a French Jesuit, maintained that the great majority of the works that he called the Greek and Latin classics were in reality forgeries, the work of mediæval monks. This view has met with no acceptance among scholars, but it has recently been revived, at least so far as concerns the Latin historian, Tacitus, and supported by able arguments. If we are to believe a writer in L'Ermitage, "Macedonius" (that is, the Greeks) have been unjustly neglected by scholars. We quote part of the article:

"The discovery of a very curious book, entitled 'Tacitus and Braccolini,' has advanced the idea that the historical works known under the name of the Latin Historians, and attributed to Cornelius Tacitus, are not at all the lost works of this illustrious writer, but historic pamphlets of the 'Germans' of the 'Germany,' written by one of the secretaries of Pope Martin V., Poggio Bracciolini, and published by him under the name of Tacitus. This thesis has been taken up and developed almost to the point of demonstration by a French savant, M. Hechart, whose two volumes, 'Méthode de l'Écriture de l'Annal and Historiæ' of Tacitus,' will remain as one of the best specimens of that scientific penetration and that logical method which are characteristic of French learning a piece apart from that of other nations. This work, be it understood, has not been taken up by the French professors are scandalized that any one should dare to demonstrate to them that what they have been taught to believe is the work of the first or second century is of the fifteenth century, and they have organized against the author a 'conspiracy of silence.' So far as the French are concerned, the work of M. Hechart remains untouched, and the daily saying is at this moment occupied with showing that it is the work of the fifteenth century, the fifteenth century, with the authenticity of this work disappears all that deformation of the past, the degradation of Roman character by German purity, chastity and virtue, which has worked so much evil in recent years.—Literary Digest.

What are the first sensations of the hand? Zola, Tolstoy and Stephen Crane have imagined them, and com batants have written them. "Some thing whizzed past me like a big blue bottle on the wing," says Zola. "The hand" of Plevna fame, and "the hand" of the air caused by its rapid passage touched my ear. Another—another. All at once I realized that these were the enemy's bullets. I had been shot. The discovery brought on a sudden violent attack of cholera-like disposition. The passage may be compared with Zola's description. The new era sharp hissing of the bullets, with their sharp ping or buzz whizzing around and sometimes hitting, gave me a sickening feeling and a cold perspiration. I felt weak around my knees, a sort of faintness and lack of strength in the joints of my legs, as if they would sink from under me. These symptoms did not decrease when several of my comrades were hit," says the late Gen. A. J. Smith, a former private in the Army of the Potomac. No one quite knows how he will behave. "No man," I am quoting Zola's stirring narrative, "really enjoys a battle. One has to strain up his nerves and take a firm grip on himself morally, and add himself to the last flames for a few moments until warmed to passion. The impulse is to run out of danger."

If the ray soldiers were to then lead forward against the enemy, the trial to his nerves will be less severe than if he has to wait under a heavy shell and shrapnel fire to which he can make no reply. In the one case he will be moving and occupied, in the other he will be waiting and waiting for the reason why. This was, perhaps, the reason why, in the war of 1870-1, the German soldier rushed impatiently against the French positions, and the heat of the drum before the thunder of our guns, and our power was shattered by the sudden fire of the slinking infantry." He was anxious to end the period of tension, and to come to hand-to-hand fighting with his enemy. But he said, and said very much to his impatience. —Fortnightly Review.

The telegram contained no particulars and his death must have been sudden.

What came near being a disastrous fire on Wednesday afternoon was averted by the excellent work of the fire department. The blaze was in the alley between Fourth and Fifth street where a quantity of shavings had been ignited by some small children. A strong wind was blowing from the south and although the fire was discovered in a very short time after it started the flames were fanned into a furious blaze which soon enveloped D. E. Slipp's barn. The department was at the scene in a very short time and turned their attention to saving Mr. Slipp's house and adjacent dwellings, which they did after a hard fight although at several different times the buildings were on fire. The barn was completely destroyed together with a large quantity of bedding and winter clothing, and in the barn was stored 125 bushels of oats. An adjoining barn belonging to Chas. Foster was also burned. The strong wind carried burning brands onto the roof of the First Congregational church and fired that structure, the water and fire causing a damage of some $400 to the property.

The loss on the church and the Slipp property was fully covered by insurance.

Killed While Hunting.

Bert St. Claire, a man 37 years old and who resided with his family on Fifth street south, accidentally shot and killed himself while hunting ducks at Sylvan lake yesterday afternoon.

Mr. St. Claire and his son, a lad about 14 years old, had been at the pass between Sylvan and Gull lakes during the day and were on their way up the lake to leave the boat which they had borrowed preparatory to returning home. The boy was in the boat and Mr. St. Claire was pushing it off shore with an oar and in some manner the oar struck the gun which was lying in the bottom of the boat and discharged it the entire charge entering his body at the right breast. The wounded man fell out the boat into the water but managed to crawl on his hands and knees to the shore. The boy jumped out of the boat and ran to his father's assistance putting some blankets under his head and then started as fast as he could run for the residence of W. B. Jones, some four miles distant, where a team was at once dispatched to the scene of the accident. On their arrival they found the man was dead and his body was brought to this city last evening and taken to D. M. Clark & Co's undertaking rooms.

The deceased leaves a wife and five children in poor circumstances. The funeral will be held from the house Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Amusements.

The Eunice Goodrich Company commenced a week's engagement at the Sleeper opera house last Monday night, opening to the largest audience seen in Brainerd for many months.

The play presented was "Only a Country Girl." Although the play has been seen here before, this company's performance can be fairly regarded as a great success. It is certainly winsome in its tone and the author has succeeded in often touching the responsive chord of sympathy, while the blending of pathos and humor is natural. Miss Goodrich seems to be at ease either in emotional or lighter roles, and her serpentine dance between the third and fourth acts received hearty applause, proving the versatility of the little lady. The character of Joseph Garland is well drawn, and as portrayed by Edward Kelly, was one of the most artistic performances ever seen in Brainerd.

In fact, the entire company works in harmony, which is necessary to a finished performance. One of the features of the company is the singing and dancing of Pottle's Baby, the little one receiving two and three encores at every performance. After the performance Saturday night the Monarch bicycle, on exhibition at Atwood & Johnson's drug store, will be given away to the holder of the lucky number. Owing to the length of the performance Saturday night the curtain will raise at 8:15 sharp.

Change of Northern Pacific Depot in Minneapolis.

On and after September 1st all Northern Pacific Passenger trains will arrive at and depart from the C. M. & St. P. Railway passenger station, corner Washington and Fourth avenues south, Minneapolis. Passengers alight from trains on a level with the street and will not have to climb a flight of stairs in order to get out of depot. This change will land passengers nearer the business part of the city. Street car lines are immediately in front of the depot entrance, thus giving quick and easy access to any part of the city. When you want to take the Northern Pacific to or from Minneapolis, remember the change of depots.

Politics and Business.

We are growing more and more to realize the great necessity of every citizen giving regard and serious thought to his political duties. Business men, workmen and the people generally are coming to realize that business and politics are closely related, and that bad politics mean bad business, and that politics cannot be neglected without endangering our economic and social progress.

We have had some distressing experience in this direction which has taught us that if we do not keep our business and politics well separated, our business will not keep us. And if somebody else does not work we will have no work to do at home. The people are entitled in one purpose this year—they will not tolerate the surrender of any more of their business, and will at once and publicly recover what they have already lost. They know how they lost it, and they know how to get it back. They mean to do it.—W. W. McKinley.

What Kind of Protection?

The popovers, who were formerly Democrats, have had great stress upon the contention that protection is paternalism—that it "protects one class of producers at the expense of consumers."

Now comes the popovers with a demand that the government increase arbitrarily the value of an ounce of silver from 60 cents to $1.29, without any profit to the state, for the exclusive protection of the special industry of silver production.

The McKinley idea of the tariff is protection for all classes of labor in this country, with a schedule of import duties that will make up the difference between European or Asiatic wage standards and the wage standard of the United States, and that will encourage thrift, industry, the market for the products of American farms.

What kind of protection do you prefer, the McKinley kind of protection for the millions of American laborers and producers, or the Bryan kind of protection for the few owners of silver bullion?—Times Herald.

Shaking Minarets of Ispahan.

When I first came in sight of the minarets, I confess that my expectations were woefully disappointed. Instead of the graceful, airy forms of bright colored tiles and gilding, I had anticipated I saw two constructions exactly like the brick chimneys of an American foundry, rising some 20 or 30 feet above the roof of a dilapidated mosque. I felt inclined to turn tail and ride home again. Their custodian, however, prevailed on me to ascend one of the narrow stairs which lead to their summits. He mounted one and I the other, and as soon as we were aloft he signaled "attention" and commenced waving his body slowly backward and forward. Both the minaret were on and the one 12 or 14 yards off followed his motions and began to bend and sway like plant willow wands. In a few moments their oscillation became so great, and we got so far out of the perpendicular, that I began to repent my curiosity and was glad to descend to terra firma. It is not difficult to understand that a single tower can be so constructed that a man at its top can make it oscillate. The mystery is, how he can make a second tower, at a distance, participate in that oscillation.—Outing.

The Rights of Privacy.

The illustrated Journalism now prevalent finds its finest achievement in the publication of photographs surreptitiously taken. The value does not seem to lie in the fact that the photographs are of notable interest, but that they have been taken by stealth when the subjects were unconscious of the purpose of the person manipulating the camera. Indeed it is a well known fact that at least one of the newspapers of New York keeps a photographer busy in the streets of the metropolis taking "snap shots" at every person who appears to be of consequence. These are used at once or filed away for use when occasion arises. Now, such practices are unquestionably invasions of the right of privacy, but we are told by the courts that the victims of such practices may not restrain by injunction the publication of photographs so taken, but that the remedy lies in a recovery for damages.

This is no remedy at all, for the chances would be that some demagogue of a judge would declare that the hurt was but fanciful and too inappreciable for a merely earthly tribunal to estimate.—North American Review.

A Storm Brewing.

Then the mother shrieked for the maid to bring her bonnet, and when she left the house there were thunder, lightning and the indications of a cyclone in her eyes.—Detroit Free Press.

The Democratic Situation.

If the family of seeing facts and the ability to reason upon them have not departed from the free silver Democrats, they will not attempt to commit the national convention to their theory.

The facts of the political situation briefly are:

First.—That the Democratic party has been defeated in every presidential election since the war when it leaned toward financial unsoundness and has been successful in every contest in which it stood for honest money.

Second.—That it cannot carry a single northern state or one-half the border states for free silver and consequently will be beaten disastrously in the election upon that issue.

Third.—That it is almost hope to carry the house of representatives upon that issue. The majority against free coinage has increased from 18 in the Fifty-second congress to 115 in the present house. There are signs of gains for silver anywhere this year.

Fourth.—Being unable to elect either a president or a house upon this issue, its supporters hope to throw the election of a president into the hands of the state legisl
